TO LIVE ECONOMICALLY IN PARIS.
Among other things in England at present, one of the most expensive cities in the world, for the most modest sum of eight shillings a day—less than thirty dollars a year! Here are the details:
A harlequin (mixture of scraps of meat, vegetables, and other ingredients), two soups.
A small glass of violet colored fluid, called wine, two soups.
Lodgings in a cellar, upon three foot eider-down, (straw) two soups.
Certainly, material existence can scarcely be reduced to less proportions than these, and so the author himself observes; but he does not add how long a man can live after this fashion, though it was often his own ordinary, and he barely reached forty years of age. It is settled then that this terrible economy costs very dear in the end.
The habit of living in this way seems to have stifled in England every sentiment of disgust. He himself fed upon the viands he describes and grew accustomed to them. He makes frequent mention of the word "harlequin," which, indeed, is similarly supplied by Eugene Sue, in his famous "Mysteries of Paris." The name is given to a certain dish, in consequence of its being composed of the most dissimilar ingredients, all sorts of rubbish. If people, who possess the means of living well, but who patronize third or fourth rate eating houses from motives of economy, only knew what they eat, their horror and disgust would prevent them from ever again crossing the thresholds of such places. The proprietors of these gargottes, as they are called in Parisian parlance, purchase the choice morsels, from the Mere Maillard, to be served up as fresh to their own customers; from Papa Desheries they obtain newly killed and skinned, their supply of hachée which are palmed off as having been caught in the Seine; and from Madame Vauard they buy the luscious penne used in making various meat-sauces, and picked up nobody knows where. As for the rabbits which figure in the tempting pot-pies of these establishments, a man is employed to hunt them, in the perilous warrens, bordering the roofs of Paris.

TOADS AND BEES.
Toads are very useful animals to the farmer and gardener, and it is a pity that they are not equally so to the bee-keeper. The insectivorous propensities that incline them to swallow beetles, moths, and caterpillars, unfortunately lead them to eat bees; and not the big fat drones alone—those fussy old fellows, like some biped animals of a higher order, make a great din and do little—but the industrious little workers, that come home laden with honey or pollen are taken in, and no question asked. Their tadpole sits quite still, and whenever a poor little bee comes within reach of his long, flexible tongue, there is a quick snap, and presto, the bee is gone.
The toad, with catching bees on clover heads, and among the flowers and grass, to become impatient; he marches up to the bee hive, and we betide the poor, wearied bee that drops short of the alighting board when he is by. We once had two bees placed close to the ground, and with alighting boards that were easily accessible to the toad, if he chose to jump little. One morning there were two middle size ones seated on one of the alighting boards, like centres, on each side of the entrance, and they exacted toll from every bee that attempted to enter, and the toll was like that levied by the old robber barons of the Rhine; it was all they had, and they were content.
The other day he had a great fat overgrown old fellow, playing the part of King Crane. The way he took down a bee showed that he was an adept at the business. There he sat, squatted on the board, with head close to the entrance, and his big goggle eyes sparkling. Miss Bee alighted. The great moth was opened, the tongue thrust out, and as quickly drawn back, and with it the gatherer of honey. Some minutes were devoted to the study of this trait in the toad's character, and then they found themselves taking an involuntary flight over a fence. The toad was raised after that, and toads are encouraged to stay in that vicinity.—Ohio Farmer.

SALES OF VALUABLE REAL ESTATE.

Pursuant to a decree of the County Court of Alexandria County, Va., of the 6th day of June, 1859, in the suit of Kinchloe & Bruin, plaintiffs, against Thomas B. Dale, the Fire Insurance Company of Alexandria, and John Richards surviving executor of John Richards deceased, for the purpose, to offer for sale, at public auction, in front of the Mayor's Office in the city of Alexandria, Virginia, on Saturday, the 22nd day of August, 1859, at 12 o'clock, M., a LOT OF GROUND, with IMPROVEMENTS thereon, situated at the Northwest intersection of Fairfax and Queen streets, in said city, one square fronting the Alexandria, Loudoun and Hampshire Railroad, beginning at said intersection and running thence Westwardly on Queen street 100 feet to the line of Eastlake; thence Northwardly and parallel to Fairfax street 82 feet, more or less, to the foot of said street; thence Eastwardly and parallel to Queen street 100 feet to Fairfax street; thence binding on Fairfax street to the beginning. The improvements are a large new brick Livery Stable, running back from Queen street nearly the entire depth of the lot, and a small building, which is now put up in the most complete and substantial manner, with every desirable convenience. The Stable has been planned and built with a view to its conversion into a Warehouse, should it be wanted for that purpose.
No. 1—A TRACT OF LAND, in the County of Prince William, Va., on the Orange & Alexandria Railroad, near its intersection with Bull Run, containing about 227 Acres and 22 Poles—being the same tract of land which was conveyed by Wilmer M. Leach, and others, to D. O. Patton, by deed, the latter conveyed to said Coyle—the exact notes and bounds of which can be ascertained by consulting either of said conveyances. About 10 acres of this land is in cultivation, has been highly improved, and is very productive. The balance of the land is of fine growth, which by its proximity to the Railroad, can be readily converted into money. There is on the place a large commodious Barn and Stable, nearly new, and built in the best manner.
No. 2—Ten per centum of the purchase money to be paid in cash, the balance in three equal instalments, at six, twelve, and eighteen months from the day of sale, the deferred payments to be secured by the bonds of the purchaser, bearing interest from date, and to be retained till the purchase money is fully paid.
S. FERGUSON BEACH, Commissioner.
